

STRATEGIES TO SUPPORT THE STUDY OF IDEAS / TOPICS

Mind-mappingAllows for a detailed study of character and can facilitate exploration of a key scene/theme (or any other topic)TableCan be used in a variety of ways but particularly effective to record evidence/analysis / evaluationTableRed/Amber/Green lets students identify which areas on their notes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise they focus on areas they code red!Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesNot so common but can be a way to track events / character	Technique	Purpose
Mind-mapping exploration of a key scene/theme (or any other topic) Table Can be used in a variety of ways but particularly effective to record evidence/analysis / evaluation Red/Amber/Green lets students identify which areas on their notes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise they focus on areas they code red! Critical Essay Using the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on. Yery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processes Not so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a text Brage These are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis. Depicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners) Annotated Drawing Another useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. / lisaupproach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot) Study Groups A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills) Summarising and explored By using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam s
Tablerecord evidence/analysis / evaluationColour-CodingRed/Amber/Green lets students identify which areas on their notes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise they focus on areas they code red!Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.Very good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesTimelineNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textBayes/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated Drawing Strip/Graphic StoryAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is a another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / topicDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things	Mind-mapping	exploration of a key scene/theme (or any other topic)
Colour-CodingRed/Amber/Green lets students identify which areas on their notes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise they focus on areas they code red!Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Depicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated Drawing Strip/Graphic StoryAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an iolint so fue understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key Idea / concept to asmeone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,		Can be used in a variety of ways but particularly effective to Colour-Codingnotes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise they focus on areas they code red!Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to and evelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Table	record evidence/analysis / evaluation they focus on areas they code red!Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesTimelineNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Depicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills. A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,		Red/Amber/Green lets students identify which areas on their Critical Essay ParagraphsUsing the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,<	Colour-Coding	notes / topics they are most and least confident with – we advise Critical Essay Paragraphsas they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic sentence can be anything they wish to focus on.Very good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textGraphThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Discussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicNot so come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, Paragraphssentence can be anything they wish to focus on.TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textStudy CardsThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,		Using the T.C.Q.A.P structure, students can practise these as often
TimelineVery good for understanding plot / key events / sequences / processesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textGraphThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations. Depicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Critical Essay	as they like; they don't need a particular task as the topic
TimelineprocessesGraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textStudy CardsThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Paragraphs
GraphNot so common but can be a way to track events / character feelings across a textStudy CardsThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,		Very good for understanding plot / key events / sequences /
Graphfeelings across a textStudy CardsThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Timeline Study CardsThese are useful to record key points and related evidence and analysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
Study Cardsanalysis.Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Graph Images/PostersDepicting a metaphor/event as an image is an excellent way for students to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
Images/Postersstudents to remember quotations (especially good for visual learners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Study Cards Iearners)Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
Annotated DrawingAnother useful way to remember evidence and quotations.CartoonDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Images/Posters Cartoon Strip/Graphic StoryDepicting a key scene/incident with images can help students retain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main joint/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, Cartoon Strip/Graphic Storyretain important information. Using the dialogue from the text is another good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills. A detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Annotated Drawing Strip/Graphic Storyanother good way of learning quotations. This approach can be useful to sequence the events of a story (plot)Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Textual AnalysisA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Textual AnalysisA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
Study GroupsDiscussing literature and debating key questions / issues is a great way to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Textual AnalysisA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Strip/Graphic Story Study Groupsway to appreciate a text and enhance evaluation skills.Textual AnalysisA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, Textual AnalysisA detailed study of a key scene/incident/description will help to deepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
Textual Analysisdeepen understanding of it. (And develop analysis and evaluation skills)Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Study Groups
Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	T
Summarising and expressing the main point/points of an idea / topicBy using your own words to express an idea you show your understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	lextual Analysis expressing the main point/points of an idea / topic Explaining a key idea / concept to someone else Understanding. You also come up with a variety of ways to say something which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition) Develops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, 	Current entitie en entrel point/points of an idea / topicsomething which will ultimately help you in an exam situation. (Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	- idea / topic(Helps avoid repetition)Explaining a key idea / concept to someone elseDevelops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply, Explaining a key idea / concept to someone else Develops thorough understanding. Works even better if you allow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	• •	0 idea / concept to someone elseallow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
idea / concept to someone elseallow the person you are explaining things to, to ask questions. As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,	Explaining a key	Develops thorough understanding Works even better if you
someone else As Einstein famously said, "If you can't explain something simply,
	•
Mnemonics Helps you to recall information / ideas	Mnemonics	Helps you to recall information / ideas
Using a tune / song / rhyme to recall Again, helps with the recall of information / ideas.		Again, helps with the recall of information / ideas. information
Students write an explanation of an idea or topic then attempt to		Students write an explanation of an idea or topic then attempt to Explain, Summarise and Simplify simplified. (Explaining in your own words shows understanding)		